War Summary of The Latest Events

Fighting on the western front is chiefly confined to the guns. No infantry attacks of great importance are reported.

The Germans are resisting desperately, in the belief that this is the decisive struggle of the war. The enemy's power of resistance is still formidable, although greatly weakened in the recent fighting.

The German losses on the western front in the recent fighting are estimated at one hundred thousand, but G. H. Perris, who is with the French armies, believes this is far below the actual figures. He says the losses are nearer two hundred thousand. The Germans have thinned their other fronts to dangerous conditions in order to hold the Western line. The rapidity of the Allied advance robbed Hindenburg of the economy in manpower effected by the Western retreat. In order to cope with the pressure he had to draw upon his strategic reserves. Between April 1-27 thirty-two fresh divisions were brought into action, reducing the general reserves of half a million to a third of that number. One of the fresh divisions was so badly cut up that it had to be withdrawn and reorganized.

British vessels sunk last week numbered 38 of 1,600 tons each and over, and 13 of less than 1,600 tons each. Eight fishing vessels were sunk. Changes are pending at the Admiralty. Rumors that Sir Edward Carson had resigned have not been confirmed. In the week before last four hundred thousand tons of shipping went down. This terrible loss must be replaced, in part at least, by increased building. The United States authorities are keenly desirous of aiding Britain in defeating the enemy's submarine campaign. Fourteen Dutch vessels, guaranteed safety by Germany, have arrived at Dutch ports from England.

The French midnight report from the Western theatre tells of heavy artillery engagements at Moronvilliers and Auberive. In the wood west of Mont Carnillet the French gained ground in a local engagement. Airmen bombarded Treves in retaliation for the German bombardment of the open towns of Chalons and Eprenay. A big fire broke out in Treves, in the centre of the town. The artillery fire was intense in the region of Dixmude, on the Belgian front.

The excess profits tax in Britain has been raised from 60 to 80 per cent. Other increases were made in the duty on tobacco and amusements under the Budget introduced Wednesday by Mr. Bonar Law. Britain is still able to bear the financial strain of what Mr. Bonar Law denounced as the greatest crime ever committed in the history of the world. Britain, said Mr. Law, is paying a greater share of her war expenses from her income than any of the other belligerents.

Air fights were a feature of the day's activities on the British Western front. Ten German machines were brought down. Six others were driven down out of control. A seventh was brought down in the British lines by gunfire. Four British machines are missing after the day's encounter.

On the Douai front German guns are increasing their fire. Stewart Lyons states that Hindenburg is expending shells freely in his anxiety to hold off the British advance on the city, whose towers can now be seen from the British lines. The Germans attempted to raid the Canadian lines on Tuesday night, but failed.

The situation in Russia is more satisfactory than recent reports seem to indicate. On May Day three hundred platforms were erected in Petrograd, from which speeches were delivered. In not a single instance was a desire for a separate peace voiced. No disturbance of any kind occurred, and extremists were shouted down.

In Mesopotamia the British have driven the Thirteenth Turkish Army Corps from its fortified positions on both banks of the Shatt-el-Adheim. This force had attempted to draw off the British from the pursuit of the Eighteenth Turkish Army Corps, which

In Mesopotamia the British have driven the Thirteenth Turkish Army Corps from its fortified positions on both banks of the Shatt-el-Adheim. This force had attempted to draw off the British from the pursuit of the Eighteenth Turkish Army Corps, which has retired to the north of Samara. British cavalry are pursuing the enemy into the Jebel Hamrin hills. Some prisoners have been captured. The British attacked at dawn, taking the enemy by surprise. His first two lines, which rested on a village, were stormed, Maude's troops sweeping through the enemy's strongly fortified positions. The British had to abandon the village in a strong counter attack, but rallied speedily and recaptured it. About midday the Turkish retreat began, covered by strong rearguards. During Monday night and Tuesday the British cavalry pursued the enemy, driving the fleeing Turks into the hills. Prisoners taken numbered 354, including 21 officers. About 200 were killed. A large quantity of munitions was seized.

In Southern Palestine patrol encounters have taken place in which both infantry and cavalry were engaged, the enemy being defeated. The British guns shelled the enemy's batteries and organization, damaging two Turkish guns and an artillery observation post and blowing up an ammunition dump.

South of Erzerum, in Turkish Armenia, the Russians have withdrawn from Mush. The report comes officially from Constantinople, but has not been confirmed from other sources. Mush is an important centre, forty miles west of Lake Van. The Petrograd official report of the Caucasian front refers to fighting elsewhere. In the Black Sea a Russian submarine torpedoed a sailing vessel of one thousand tons and a steam tug.

The control of the Mesopotamia expedition was taken over by the War Office after the surrender of Townshend's army. Divided control between the War Office and the Government of India was responsible for the lack of organization that left Townshend short of medical comforts and supplies when on the march to Bagdad. General Collard, working under the Quartermaster-General, is now the responsible head of the whole organization for the supply of Maude's army. As a result, between last July and January the traffic up the Tigris increased by no less than a thousand per cent. The river transport passed into the hands of soldiers, with Col. Grey at their head, using Basra as his base. Trained staffs of engineers and artisans were sent out with machinery, plant, material for workshops and power houses. Wharves, warehouses, jetties, factories of all kinds were begun. Labor was assembled from India, Egypt and China. The Tigris was dredged, charted, surveyed and made more easily navigable by a new swarm of miscellaneous craft collected from every quarter to swell the transport fleet. Railway work and river transport were co-ordinated with rare efficiency, and, as the British advanced, the supply services were pushed up by land and water, and never failed. All this explains why General Maude, after the capture of Kut, was enabled to sweep triumphantly to Bagdad and beyond.

A mandate for funds to carry on is very acute at the present time. A special personal appeal will be made directly or indirectly to every one in the county. This is a time when no one can afford to overlook which everyone should liberally contribute. We aim at raising $1000 in Napanee, and hope to reach $1500. Several other towns size of ours have each given the latter amount. A committee has been formed in Napanee and a monster rally will be held at the Armories on the evening of the 16th, and a vigorous house-to-house canvass will be made on that day. It is expected that sections will be thoroughly worked through the clergy and churches of the county. Mr. E. THIS A LAND OF SMILING PLENTY

War we are learning that the difference between the ploughshare word is more a matter of degree than of actual fact. The sword, however, might be, would have to be used if there was not behind it an army of men to drive the plough and raise the crops and keep the soil flowing. The war must be backed by the agricultural. Trench mortars, field "tanks" are served by men and upon gang-plows, tractor harvest implements operate workers. In this country we have hands put in crop a greater acre of soil than we ever cultivated.

It is the bounden duty of every man who is not in military service to do what he can to the increasing the food output. Each at the Guild Hall Mr. George said that we must not rely on our chances that the war will end before 1918. We all hope that it may be vanquished within a few months, but we should be prepared for victory as if we felt it deferred a full year.

Organization of Resources in this province is carrying on an increasing energy its campaign in behalf of increased production. Its endeavor is to create a great force of Canadian workers to win from the soil the crop it is capable of yielding with the efforts of so many hands. Every man who joins that force enlists in an auxiliary army to the enemy, especially those who are engaged in the submarine service. Every man should read the appeal that is being made by the Organization of Resources on one of the advantages of this issue. The facts set forth there cannot but be most convincing to our people. The least we can do is to go to the rescue of our country and Empire by joining the ranks of the farm workers. We must help to keep in rationing our brethren who have the most of the enemy on the battlefield of seeding has come. The time is effecting junctions between farmers who need help and the towns and cities who are in need of help. Many farmers are at a point and putting them in a much more convenient, or in a bigger crop than they are now putting in. Many men in the cities are, from the same motives, willing to leave their remunerative employment to go to the help of the farm workers. The Ontario Organization of Resources Committee is

Experience

Back of this season's new Overlands are a direct line of nine preceding models from which they were developed.

They directly continue the line of models that made the Overland name stand in the public mind for integrity of value.

Overland policy has steadfastly SUSTAINED that integrity of value in the car throughout its entire service in the hands of owners.

Over three hundred thousand of these cars are now in use and the helpful suggestions of their owners and of the more than four thousand dealer and factory-branch organizations that sold and served them, are largely responsible for the balanced greatness of this season's models.

Their new beauty, their perfected easy riding qualities, their proven sturdiness and mechanical excellence, their admitted tire, fuel and oil economy make them worthy of the confidence we enjoy, that they will still further enhance Overland prestige.

They embody the wisdom of the unmatched Overland experience in building cars of this type.

They are dominant values, cars of proven dependability and sterling worth.

UNCLE SAM PREPARES

Will Raise an Army by Selective Draft.

Congress Voted by an Overwhelming Majority for Compulsory Service, in Which Farmers Will Be Exempted — "Liberty Loan of 1917" Being Raised to Fight Against Autocracy.

WASHINGTON, May 1. — By overwhelming majorities both the Senate and House passed late Saturday night the Administration bill to raise a war army by selective draft.

The final roll calls brought into line behind the bill many Senators and Representatives who had fought for the volunteer system until routed by decisive defeat of volunteer amendments earlier in the day in both Houses. The Senate, which had voted down the volunteer plan, 68 to 18, passed the bill by a vote of 81 to 8. In the House the vote against the volunteer plan was 313 to 109, and that by which the bill itself was passed was 397 to 24.

An amendment written into the bill in the House was one authorizing the President to include in the exempted classes persons "engaged in agriculture." Farmers had not been specifically mentioned in the exemption clause which authorized the President to use in part or exempt entirely from military service those engaged in pursuits needful in the maintenance of the military forces of the United States.

The House twice recorded itself overwhelmingly in opposition to the volunteer system.

Both Senate and House adopted amendments just before the final roll-calls which would greatly increase the pay of enlisted men during the war. The House provision would make their pay $30 a month, and that approved by the Senate would fix it at $29 a month. The present pay is only $15.

The American training system probably will follow to some extent that used in Canada, where the instructors have made every effort to reproduce as closely as possible conditions at the front. Sections of trenches have been built at the Canadian camps exactly duplicating important parts of the lines in France held by Canadian troops.

Mr. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, Saturday decided that the great bond issue which he will soon begin offering to the public will be known as "Liberty Loan of 1917." A Treasury statement says:

"The money to be raised by this loan is for the purpose of waging war against autocracy. It is to supply the sinews of battle in the interest of free government. It is peculiarly appropriate that as the negotiation of this loan will constitute the first great step of the United States in the prosecution of the war it should be issued in the name of freedom."

FIERCE BATTLE RAGES

British Capture Pivot Towns From the Germans.

The Enemy Has Been Fighting Bitterly in Defence of Every Foot of Land Secured by General Haig's Forces—Nine Hundred Tentons Were Taken Prisoner, the Canadians Capturing Two Hundred.

LONDON, May 1.—A new British offensive on a tremendous scale is in progress on the French front. The blow was struck over a front of several miles in width. Part of Oppy, six miles east of Arras, and the pivotal point of this defensive sector, is in British hands, together with an entire German trench system a mile in extent to the south of Oppy. All of Arleux, a mile further north of Oppy, has also been taken by the Canadians, who gained positions a mile and a half in length by a depth of a mile. These towns are supposed to constitute the northernmost points of the "Wotan line."

Both positions were centres for German counter-attacks that for sheer violence surpassed any recent fighting on the western front. The British thrust is toward Douai, northern pivot of the Hindenburg line. To stop it Field Marshal Hindenburg is recklessly throwing thousands of his grey-clad troopers in massed attack. Every word from the front emphasizes the enormous total of the German losses—and in the face of this, the continued counter-attacks.

Bitter fighting continued throughout Saturday night and Sunday. Reuter's correspondent at the British headquarters telegraphs that the Germans apparently have a good idea of the principal points against which the British effort is directed and which must be carried before it will be possible for the British to go ahead again. The Germans are throwing in fresh troops to defend these positions as rapidly as it is possible to hurry them up.

The contour of the Scarpe valley is particularly favorable to the establishment of a perfect nest of machine gun positions, which are extremely difficult to detect, and therefore are very hard to deal with by artillery fire, but they are gradually being subdued.

"Just as in the last pitched battle, the hottest fighting centred around Monchy, now Roeux is the scene of the severest fighting," the correspondent continues. "The Germans appreciate the tactical value of Roeux as a complement to Monchy, and are sacrificing troops in droves in the effort to keep the British out, but the concentration of big British guns is making the Germans pay a heavy price for their opposition."

"All night long the battle crashed and thundered around Roeux, and the high sun this perfect Sabbath morning must be looking down upon a veritable German holocaust between the chemical works and Mount Pleasant wood. To the northward we are well established in Arleux village and along the line of advance running from the south-east of Arleux wood to about 1,200 yards west of Acherville. Our posts were pushed forward up the western slope of Greenland hill and now command the cross-roads northward of its sum-

Winnipeg, April 30.—Neither the opening of navigation nor the new system of conducting pit trading under censorship furnished any sensation in the Winnipeg grain market today, and the morning on the exchange was an exceedingly quiet one. The trade is adjusting itself rapidly to a new and hitherto untried condition, which undoubtedly impeded trading today to some extent. Actual changes in prices at the close were small.

In the cash market there was little or no trade in wheat. The government agents were not buyers. There was a fair demand for oats, but, broadly, the cash grain trade is demoralized, and it will probably be some days before it is adjusted to the new conditions of things.

Several other fortified positions. At midday, the offensive was made, and at its conclusion the French line had been moved into territory previously occupied by the enemy to a distance of five or six thousand yards. Similarly to the eastward a thrust was made north-east of Montebello, and a gain of about five miles, and placed the French astride the Moronuroy road.

The fighting in this region has been brought to a conclusion, as indicated by the official statement of the Paris War Office, announcing that artillery duels are still going on. There has been a continuation of the artillery activity from St. Omer to the Oise and along the Es-Dames, north-east of

The fight had stopped Denenti Poles, North Gage avenue, and charging him, when Bill Oleksy, Morris street, and Aron, 3 North Gage avenue, but attempted to rescue Poles during the struggle threw a bottle of liquor to the pavement. The men were arrested, the charged with violating the Peace Act; Oleksy with assaulting the police, and Curry with g with the police.

Loan to Belgium.
INGTON, May 1.—In addition to France and Italy between $200,000,000 and $500,000,000 the United States will make a loan to Belgium, the first of which is yet to be determined. Unofficial estimates of the Belgian loan place it at $150,000,000. The administration officials have been in a positive mood toward an approval of a Belgian loan ever since the war finance measure was passed, but formal application was not made until Monday when the Belgian Minister, Cartier, called upon Secretary of War and placed before him the case for the relief desired.

captured by Bad Weather.
LONDON, May 1.—A determined effort was made on Thursday night to eject the British from the positions gained by them in their attack on the Macedonian front earlier in the week. The British defeated this effort, inflicting heavy losses on their adversaries, the War Office announces.

"On the front between Lake Doiran and the Vardar," says the statement, "a strong attack by the enemy during Thursday night on our positions situated at the extreme right of the positions gained by us Tuesday night succeeded in penetrating our trenches, but a counter-attack was immediately organized and the enemy was driven out leaving a large number of dead."

"On the Struma front the artillery has been active against villages near our front line."

The French War Office report reads:

"Eastern theatre: On the 26th the Bulgarians, after a violent bombardment, succeeded in gaining a temporary foothold in the trenches recently captured by the British troops west of Lake Doiran, but an immediate counter-attack drove them out with heavy losses. The bad weather has grown worse. The snow on the hills has reached a depth of six or eight feet."

Relief for U. S. Publishers.
WASHINGTON, May 1.—Lord Northcliffe, the noted British publisher, has offered the output of his print paper mills in North-eastern Canada, to American newspaper publishers to relieve the print paper situation. The output of the mills is 60,000 tons a year, and probably a sufficient factor to break the high price market.

English Hero Captured.
PARIS, May 1.—The Matin says that news has been received at British headquarters that Lieut. William Lee Robinson, the aviator who destroyed a zeppelin, is not dead, but a prisoner in Germany. Lieut. Robinson's gasoline ran out and he was obliged to land within the German lines.

Decoration Day in England.
LONDON, May 1.—Another American innovation is the movement afoot here to emulate the American national Decoration Day by observing May 30 as a special occasion for strewing flowers on the graves of the soldiers of all the allied countries who have fallen in the war.

PETROGRAD, May 1.—Russian troops have captured from the Turks the ground lost south-east of Erzincan, on the Caucasian front, it is announced officially. The statement says:

"Near Balumer, 40 miles south-east of Erzincan, our detachments recaptured the height lost Saturday. All the Turkish attempts to attack our positions near Take-Pinoori, five miles west of Balumer, were repelled. On the remainder of the Caucasian front rifle firing and reconnaissances occurred."

"On the Russo-Galician and Rumanian fronts the usual firing and scouting operations took place."

Pirate Has Perished.
COPENHAGEN, May 1.—Lieutenant-Commander Petz, one of the most successful of the German submarine commanders, has perished in the submarine campaign. The newspapers of his home town, Koenigsberg, carry an official death notice, although the Admiralty has said nothing of the loss of his boat. Commander Petz was mentioned in despatches in February as being in charge of a submarine which destroyed 52,000 tons of shipping in one day.

Big Indian War Loan.
LONDON, May 1.—A Simla despatch says that subscriptions to India's special war loan exceed ten million pounds sterling. In 1915 India subscribed one million pounds sterling to the British war loan. In January of 1917 the British Government arranged the issue of a war loan of unlimited amount in India, to be raised during 1917 and 1918. Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law later stated in the House of Commons that the amount expected to be raised in India was one hundred million pounds sterling.

THE CRISIS

France, England and Italy in peace times did not depend upon America but on Russia, Roumania and Bulgaria for most of their breadstuffs. With these sources closed the crisis of the hour demands that we see that our soldiers and the Motherland are fed.

Everyone in Great Britain has been put on limited rations: meat is prohibited one day a week and the making of cakes and pastry has been stopped. Further restrictions are anticipated.

Bread has gone to 28c per four-pound loaf in England, for the first time since the Crimean War.

Lord Devonport, British Food Comptroller, proposes taking authority to search the houses of Great Britain to prevent food hoarding.

Forty million men, less the casualties, are now on active service.

Twenty million men and women are supporting them by service in other war activities.

In the last analysis, the land is bearing this burden.

One million tons of food-carrying ships have been torpedoed since February 1st, 1917.

Germany's hope for victory is in the starvation of Britain through the submarine.

Canada's sons will have died in vain if hunger compels the Motherland's surrender.

The land is waiting—the plough is ready—will we make the plough mightier than the sword?

People are starving to-day in Belgium, in Serbia, Poland, in Armenia, in many quarters of the globe.

Famine conditions are becoming more wide-spread every day.

On these alarming food conditions becoming known President Wilson immediately appointed a Food Comptroller for the United States. He selected Herbert C. Hoover, whom the world is indebted as Chairman of the International Belgium Relief Commission for his personal direction of distribution of food among the starving Belgians.

Mr. Hoover is already urging sacrifice and food restrictions, for, as he states, "The war will probably last another year and we shall have all we can do to supply the necessary food to carry our Allies through with their full fighting stamina."

The Problem for Ontario

The land under cultivation in Ontario in 1916 is 365,000 acres less than in 1915.

Consider how much LESS Ontario produced in 1916 than she raised in 1915:

	Year	Acres	Bushels	1916 Acres	DECREASE Bus
Fall Wheat	1916	704,867	14,912,050	105,315	9,794,
	1915	811,185	24,737,011
Barley and Oats	1916	529,886	12,388,969	24,432	7,504,
	1915	552,318	19,803,129
Peas and Beans	1916	95,512	1,213,979	31,401	799,
	1915	126,913	2,013,019
Corn	1916	258,332	12,717,072	51,441	9,043,
	1915	309,773	21,760,496
Potatoes and Carrots	1916	139,523	7,108,429	34,411	5,858,
	1915	173,934	13,267,023
Mangel-Wurzels and Turnips	1916	42,793	9,756,015	8,006	15,600,
	1915	50,799	25,356,323

Other crops show as critical decline.

Reports from Ontario on the condition of fall wheat 1917 are decidedly discouraging.

As there is an average of not more than one man each hundred acres of farm land in Ontario, prospects indicate even a still smaller acreage under cultivation in 1917 unless extra labor is supplied.

Canada's sons will have died in vain if hunger compels the Motherland's surrender.

The land is waiting—the plough is ready—will we make the plough mightier than the sword?

Will we help the acres to save the flag?

World-Hunger Stares Us in the Face

David Lubin, representative of the United States to the International Institute of Agriculture—maintained by forty Governments—reports officially to Washington that the food grains of the world on March 31st, 1917, showed a shortage of 150,000,000 bushels below the amount necessary to feed the world until August, 1917. He declares it is beyond question that unless a greater acreage is put to crop in 1917 there will be WORLD-HUNGER before the 1918 crop is harvested.

The failure of the grain crop in the Argentine Republic, which is ordinarily a great grain-exporting nation, resulted in an embargo being placed, in March, 1917, upon the export of grains from that country to avert local famine.

The United States Department of Agriculture, in its official report, announces the condition of the fall wheat crop (which is two-thirds of their total wheat crop) on April 1st, 1917; to be the poorest ever recorded and predicts a yield of 244,000,000 bushels below the crop of 1915. The 1916 crop was poor. Even with favorable weather, the wheat crop of the United States is likely to be the smallest in thirty-five years, not more than 64% of the normal crop.

Under date of April 10th, Ogden Armour, executive head of Armour & Company, one of the world's largest dealers in food products, stated that unless the United States wishes to walk deliberately into a catastrophe, the best brains of the country, under Government supervision, must immediately devise means of increasing and conserving food supplies. Armour urged the cultivation of every available acre. The food shortage, he said, is world-wide. European production is cut in half, the Argentine Republic has suffered droughts, Canada and the United States must wake up!

Food Production is the Greatest Problem the World Faces To-day

Owing to destruction by submarines, ocean ships are scarce.

It is much easier to protect shipping between Canada and England than on the longer voyages from India or Australia.

One vessel can make twice as many trips from Canada to Britain as from India, and four times as many as from Australia.

Therefore, every ton of food stuffs grown in Canada is worth to the Motherland two tons grown in India or four tons grown in Australia.

Why the Call to Canada is So Urgent

If this country does not raise a big crop this year, not only will the people of Canada suffer but the Motherland and her Allies will suffer and their military power will be weakened or paralyzed. Therefore, the right solution of the present war problem comes back to the farm, as to a foundation upon which our whole national and international structure must be built and maintained.

The Second-Line Trenches

—McCay in The New York American.

The farmers know that they are the last reserve, and that the soil on which crops are grown is the strategic ground on which wars are decided. To their care is entrusted the base of supplies.

To enable the farm to do the work two factors are essential. The first is Time. Whatever we are to do must be done at once. Nature waits for no man. The second is Labor. Many farmers cannot plant the acres they would because they cannot get the necessary help. Many are afraid to increase their acreage because they fear they would not be able to cultivate and harvest an unusual crop after they have raised it. If they are to do the work that is essential for them to do, the last man in each city, town and village must be mobilized at once.

Every man not on Active Service can help. In every city, town and village are men who, by their training on the farm, or by their present occupation, can readily adapt themselves to farm work. These can render no greater service to the Empire at the present time than by answering the call of the farm. Capable men and boys willing to learn should not allow their lack of farm experience to stand in the way.

Can the employer render a more signal service in this Woman Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Columbus, Ohio. — "I had almost given up. I had been sick for six years with female troubles and nervousness. I had a pain in my right side and could not eat anything without hurting my stomach. I could not drink cold water at all nor eat any kind of raw fruit, nor fresh meat nor chicken. From 178 pounds I went to 118 and would get so weak at times that I fell over. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and ten days later I could eat and it did not hurt my stomach. I have taken the medicine ever since and I feel like a new woman. I now weigh 127 pounds so you can see what it has done for me already. My husband says he knows your medicine has saved my life." — Mrs. J. S. BARLOW, 1624 South 4th St., Columbus, Ohio.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound contains just the virtues of roots and herbs needed to restore health and strength to the weakened organs of the body. That is why Mrs. Barlow, a chronic invalid, recovered so completely.

It pays for women suffering from any female ailments to insist upon having Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

MADE HIS WORKMEN RIVALS.

How Charles M. Schwab Spurred Them on to Greater Efforts.

In telling how he increased the efficiency of one of his departments, Charles M. Schwab, the famous steel man, says in the American Magazine:

"It was near the end of the day; in a few minutes the night shift would come on duty. I turned to a workman who was standing beside one of the red mouthed turners and asked him for a piece of chalk.

"How many heats has your shift made to-day?" I queried.

"Six," he replied.

"I chalked a big '6' on the floor and passed along without another word. When the night shift came up they saw the '6' and asked about it.

"The big boss was in here today," said the day men. "He asked us how many heats we had made, and we told him six. He chalked it down."

"The next morning I passed through the same mill. I saw that the '6' had been rubbed out and a big '7' was there instead. The night shift had announced itself. That night I went back. The '7' had been erased and a '10' swaggered in its place. The day force recognized no superiors. There was a fine competition was started, and it went on until this mill, formerly the poorest producer, was turning out more than any other in the plant."

lack of farm experience to stand in the way.

Can the employer render a more signal service in this crisis than by encouraging these men to help the farmer to cultivate every available acre, and by making it easy for them to go?

Ontario's farm lands are waiting—the implements are ready—the equipment is complete—the farmer is willing—all he needs is labor.

So short is the world's food supply that without increased production many in Canada must go hungry, and even with enormously increased production we cannot expect cheap food. The world is waiting for our harvest.

If peace should be declared within a year, the food conditions will be no better, for the accumulated hunger of the Central Empires must be met. This will absorb a large part of the world's supply.

We do not know when this war shall cease. It is endless—its lengthening out has paralyzed the thought and conception of all men who thought about it and its possible time of conclusion. Three months—six months, we said; nine months, a year, we said; and yet two years and eight months have passed their long dreary and sanguinary length and there is no man who can tell how long this gigantic struggle may yet last.

Lloyd George, in a letter addressed to farmers throughout the Empire, said:

"The line which the British Empire holds against the Germans is held by those who WORK ON THE LAND as well as by those who fight on land and sea. If it breaks at any point it breaks everywhere. In the face of the enemy the seamen of our Royal naval and mercantile marine and the soldiers gathered from every part of our Empire hold our line firstly. You workers on land must hold your part of our line as strongly. Every full day's labor you do helps to shorten the struggle and brings us nearer victory. Every idle day, all loitering, lengthens the struggle and makes defeat more possible. Therefore, in the nation's honour, heed! Acquit yourselves like men, and as workers on land do your duty with all your strength!"

So, for the honor of Canada's soldiers in France—and for the glory of our New-born Nationhood—let it be said of Ontario's citizens that, in the hour of our greatest need, their response was worthy of their sons.

We owe a great debt to those who are fighting for us.

STING OF THE HONEYBEE.

About the Most Effective Infernal Machine In Existence.

In proportion to its size, the sting of the honeybee is probably the most effective infernal machine in existence.

The stinging apparatus is smaller than that of a rattlesnake, and a single sting has been known to kill a man. When we realize that it is almost invisible and consider that a man who cannot fail to be stung, it seems the very epitome of devilry.

The honeybee's sting is complicated—so complicated that many words and much ink have been used in discussing its construction and use.

It is generally supposed that the sting consists of a shaft of three parts, the principal one being a sheath within which move two barbed lancets, like the barbs of a fishhook, the barbs are not easily extracted from the flesh in which they have been driven. The sheath and the lancets combined form a hollow tube through which the poison flows from the poison sac.

Two hairy, soft projections, evidently very sensitive, inform the bee when she is in contact with a stinging object.—Popular Science Monthly.

Frohman's Little Safe.

When Charles Frohman was treasurer with Haverly's minstrels he conceived a novel stunt of arousing curiosity in small towns. He bought a small iron safe, about three feet high, and on it had painted in big letters, "Treasurer, Haverly's Minstrels." Now actually there was little need for this safe, but it was always carried on the first load of baggage that went to a hotel. It would be placed in a conspicuous place, and then Frohman, waiting until the proper moment, would bustle up to it with an air of great importance, open it, put in two or three $100 bills, close it and go away. When the crowd had gone he would slip back and get the money out again. It proved a good advertising stunt.—"Charles Frohman, Manager and Man."

The White House.

A prize of $500 was offered in Washington's administration for the best design for a house to serve as a home for the president in Washington. James Hoban, an Irishman from South Carolina, was the successful competitor. His sketch contained so many wings and colonnades that the public was horrified, and frills and gingerbread decorations were eliminated. The result was the two story White House as we know it now. Washington laid the cornerstone of the building in 1792. It was completed in 1799, the year of Washington's death.

OBITUARY

There died at her home in Strath-

had been ailing for some time, still the family had hope that she might recover.

Mrs. Lott had lived in this section all her married life and we never heard one disparaging word of her.
Her high moral and christian char-

those who came in contact with her.
Verily such a pure and correct life

Her death has cast a gloom over the community. Who ever entered her

FT YOUR CORNS OFF WITH FINGERS

Tells how to loosen a tender corn or callus so it lifts out without pain.

You reckless men and women who are pestered with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from lockjaw or blood poison are now told by a Cincinnati authority to use a drug—called freezone, which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn or callus the soreness is relieved and soon the entire corn or callus, root and all, lifts off with the fingers.

Freezone dries the moment it is applied, and simply shrivels the corn or callus without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. A small bottle of freezone will cost very little at any of the drug stores, but will positively rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or hardened callus. If your druggist hasn't any freezone he can get it at any wholesale drug house for you.

OPTIMISTIC LETTER FROM DR.
BAKER

Belleville, April 23rd, '17.

Editor Ontario,—

Permit me to write a brief letter concerning the fire, which destroyed
Massey Hall.

First—I want to thank the public
who so kindly helped on the night of the fire and who did everything possible to contribute to the safety and comfort of our students and teachers. The firemen did heroic service and are deserving of special praise. Through their labour, the main building was saved. Thanks to the press for its full and sympathetic report.

Second—This loss, while incon-veniening us in our work, does not interfere with it. We go back to the class rooms that we used before Massey Hall was built—classrooms
in which Mr. Justice Clute, The Hon.
T. W. Crothers, Dr. F. W. Merchant and other distinguished sons sat.
The war has so seriously affected our attendance that these classrooms are large enough for our present needs.
All the classes are meeting to-day so that our work is going on as usual.
I should be glad if this fact would be given as wide a publication as possible. I received a letter this morning saying that the writer had heard
"that Albert College would soon close." My reply to him was that "Albert College never had fairer to go on and do its work efficiently than it does to-day. While our loss is great, we are glad to state that our books and valuable papers were in the safe and thus escaped the fire."
Third—The self-contained manner in which the students came out of the building and helped is a matter of pride to me. The staff informs

Women's Patriotic Service and Red Cross Work

Through the "U. E. Loyalist" Chapter, I.O.D.E.

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. R. G. H. Travers was "At Home" to a large number of the members of the U.E.L. Chapter and Committee.

A most delightful social time was enjoyed by all present. During the afternoon the ladies gathered around Mrs. Harshaw, while Mrs. W. G. Wilson read the following address, and Mrs. J. G. Daly made the presentation:

MRS. A. T. HARSHAW.

Regent of the United Empire Loyalist Chapter, I.O.D.E.

We, the members of the U. E. L. Chapter and Committee, have met here to-day through the kindness of Mrs. Travers to tender to you our appreciation of your devotion to the work of the U.E.L. Chapter, and your keen interest in furthering (as far as lies in the power of our Chapter) the benevolent, educational and patriotic aims and high ideals of the Order.

Your untiring energy in the packing and despatching of so many fine boxes of comforts and hospital supplies to our brave boys in France; your untiring attention to details, and the mental effort of carrying on the voluminous correspondence entailed by the work of our Committee merit the admiration and gratitude which they excite.

We wish to present to you this life membership pin as a token of our appreciation, trusting that you may wear it for many years to come.

Signed on behalf of the U. E. L. Chapter and Committee by Mrs. J. H. Madden, 1st Vice Regent; Mrs. W. H. Templeton, 2nd Vice Regent; Mrs. J. E. Robinson, Recording Secretary; Mrs. W. J. Campbell, Corresponding Secretary; Miss E. Richardson, Treasurer; Mrs. G. Wilson, Educational Secretary; Miss C. Mill, "Echoes" Secretary; Miss W. Chinneck, Standard Bearer.

Although taken completely by surprise Mrs. Harshaw, in a few well-chosen words, voiced her sincere appreciation of the kindness and regard shown her and said that as long as she could she would try to do her best to merit the gift of the members of the Chapter and Committee.

SECRETARY.

NOTICE

The regular monthly meeting of the U.E.L. Chapter I.O.D.E., will be held in the Board Room of the Library, Monday p.m., May 7th, at 3.30 sharp. Will all members be present, if possible.

of the building and helped is a matter of pride to me. The staff informs me that all of them conducted themselves heroically. College business called me out of the city, but nothing more could have been done, than was done, if I had been there.

Fourth—I would not, I could not close this letter without an expression of devout thankfulness to Almighty God, Whose child this College is, for His special care. The time the fire was first seen, the fact that all were out of the building soon after it started, and that when all hope was given up of saving the main building, the wind changed—are causes of devout thankfulness to Almighty God.

Fifth—In response to enquiries regarding the future of our work, I would say that the College will go on as it has done in the past. The first great objective, that the Board had in the endowment scheme has been reached; $100,000 has been subscribed. The call has been made for the first instalment and in very many cases the whole subscription has been paid, while the letters accompanying the gifts are most encouraging. The people are glad for the opportunity of paying it. One man, a member of a sister denomination, expresses thanks for the privilege of taking part in the work. We realize now, as we never have realized, the need of Endowment and Extension, and we know now as we never have known before,—because of the response in raising the first $100,000—that all the money that is needed to carry on this work efficiently will be forthcoming.

THE SCARLET Tanager.

He Wears His Gaudy Fireman's Suit Only in the Summer.

The country folk call the scarlet tanager the firebird. His feathers set the woods on fire. Reversing the figure, the firebird puts out the torch of the sumac and pales the plumage of the oriole that has come to fly "in tropic splendor through our northern sky."

This tanager of ours is not much of a songster. He does not have to be. All he has to do is "stand on" in the show in order to share applause with the gold tongued wood thrush and the mellow noted meadow lark. Seemingly the tanager thinks that his call is to be preferred to his song, for he calls forty times where he sings once. The tip of a tree gives him the best stage setting for his beauty, and there he perches, looks the sun in the eye and chip-churs by the hour. His mate is a modestly garbed female, who is willing to attend to home duties while Beau Brummel gallivants abroad.

It is only for a season that the tanager wears his fireman suit. Nature's rule that he must change his clothes when September is spent may seem foolish to him, but he obeys to the feather. In dun and drab he goes south, where he tells an unbelieving and brilliantly plumaged company of tropic birds of the wonder of his summer dress.

Interesting Figures After Being Dry Seven Months.

Although Manitoba has been "dry" only since June 1, drunkenness in the province decreased 87 per cent., as compared with 1915, according to the official reports from the police court records. The statistics for 1916 closed on December 30, and police and prohibition officials agree that, owing to rigid temperance laws and rigid enforcement, there was a huge decrease in crime. There were only 621 convictions for crime in Manitoba in 1916, as against 927 for 1915.

There are five judicial districts in the province. The following are detailed figures of commitments to jail secured in each district for 1916 and 1915:

	1905.	1906.
Winnipeg	573	471
Brandon	206	65
Minnedosa	32	21
Portage la Prairie	111	58
Morden	15	7

There are 24 criminals in the Portage la Prairie jail at present. Of these 16 come from far northern Manitoba, which is being formed into the northern or Dauphin judicial district. Only 8 are from the central or Portage section. Another interesting fact in connection with the report is that during 1915, in Carberry, there were 34 convictions for various crimes. Since the Temperance Act came into force in Manitoba, there have been none.

In 1915 and up to the time that prohibition shut out the bars of the province, there were 3,176 drunk or drunk-and-disorderly convictions in the eastern judicial district. Since then there have been only 419. In Brandon district, for the same periods, the figures are 423 and 46; in Portage, 205 and 23, and in St. Boniface, 133 and 6, or totals for the cities of the province of 3,937 and 494. There was only one conviction for drunkenness in St. Boniface during the past four months.

There were 214 persons convicted for selling liquor in the province since June 1, 1916, as far as the records of the provincial liquor license department show. Of these 107 passed through the city police court in Winnipeg.

Prohibition has reduced drunkenness in Manitoba more than 86 per cent. during the half year the Macdonald Act has been in operation, according to a statement by J. N. McLean, chief inspector of the provincial liquor license department.

Mr. MacLean bases his assertion on official figures for Brandon during the half-year period the prohibition law has been in force. Since June 1 there have been only 46 cases of drunkenness in the second city of the province, as compared with 455 cases from January 1 to June 1, 1916.

"These figures are typical of the entire province," said Mr. MacLean.

"The Macdonald Act has had a remarkable effect on sobriety in Manitoba," said Mr. MacLean. "A year ago drunkenness was common. Today it is exceptional, at least the public evidence of it is lacking."

The biggest effect of the Macdonald Act, in the opinion of Mr. MacLean, has been in entirely abolishing the "treating system." "A man may drink as much as he likes in his own home now," said the chief license inspector, "but there is no public drinking at bars, and no crowds of

Canada North a Land of Promise

IT is in the consciousness of every intelligent Canadian that the peace which is inevitable, and may even now be on the way, will mean for the Dominion expansion and growth in the next generation far beyond anything this country has known. This, in view of the opening to the plowshare and to civilization of the prairie provinces, is saying a great deal, but when Charles Camsell, of the Geological Survey of Canada, tells us that there are, in Western Canada, areas aggregating 642,000 square miles that must still be considered as unexplored, and in Northern Quebec about 250,000 square miles more, making an aggregate of 892,000 square miles, it will be seen that the opportunities for development, in the light of experience, and with modern tools, can hardly be exaggerated.

East of Reindeer Lake and Kaskan River, in Manitoba and North-West Territory, this authority tells us, there are 73,000 miles of unexplored country, or a division of the continent larger than the sum of the areas of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Massachusetts. To some people the term "unexplored" is synonymous with "uninhabitable." Many in Canada used so to regard the areas now included in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta a few years ago. But the statement that territory is unexplored carries with it, to people informed on the subject of settlement, the inference that, assuming ripeness for the times, everything is possible for the prospector and the immigrant within its borders.

On the peninsula between Ungava and Hudson Bay there is an area of 75,000 miles that no man can talk about with authority, and this is only one of several areas around the great inland sea toward which a railroad was building when the war broke out. In ignorance of what these stretches have to offer, many are saying now, as in the past they have said of other unexplored lands, that there is nothing in them to invite adventure, enterprise, or industry. They do not know. Regardless of pessimistic beliefs, energy, and capital united, previous to August, 1914, in a determined effort to open up the Hudson Bay country, and the work was only temporarily interrupted when Belgium was invaded.

Every argument that is used to chill expectation with regard to the Hudson Bay country was employed to turn the early westbound immigrant, south of the line, a generation or so ago, away from Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana, Wyoming, Oregon, and Washington. These territories, it was held with pertinacity and confidence, would "of course" never become habitable, "at least, not to any extent." Later the same discouraging future was outlined for Western Canada, east of the Rockies. Yet people who have made a surface investigation of the Hudson Bay region say that there is no more reason why populations should not exist, and thrive, and prosper within it

Besides growing many for immediate use the garden should produce so-called storage crops which can be stored during winter. Some, of course, do not need to be planted as early as the plants were described last week. A week should elapse from the time the lettuce is planted before it should be sown.

BEETS, CARROTS, PARSNIPS, AND SALSIFY. These are most important members of the vegetable family. They are usually grown for winter purposes, though carrots and parsnips are relished by their earlier stages of growth. These demand practically no attention. The seeds should be sown in straight rows at a depth of three-quarters of an inch. When the plants have reached a height of three inches they should be thinned out so that they stand apart and parsnips three to four inches apart, and carrots and salsify three inches apart. It will be found that the parsnips are very tender, and for this reason it is advisable to plant a row of lettuce with the parsnips, so that they will serve as a mulch. Young beet plants may be sown in spring greens. It is necessary that the soil be cultivated at intervals during the summer months so the crops may grow. They require a general rule requiring as much as some of the other crops. In the fall the beets should be pulled up and the tops close to the head, not cut off as in the case of carrots, or salsify, which should be pulled up about one-half the roots preparatory to winter use.

CORN. In planting corn about two or three inches should be made with a hoe six kernels of corn should be sown in this and covered with soil which should be gently tramped on it. When the corn is about three inches high, the three sturdiest should be pulled out. The soil drawn up around the stalks should be given them support. The kernels on the cob should be ready to use. It is also a good practice to cultivate the soil often around the corn. Growers claim that corn and cabbage faster when plenty of cultivation.

CABBAGE. Cabbage is most widely grown vegetable. Cabbage plant requires of moisture, and yet if the soil is too wet the home now," said the chief license inspector, "but there is no public drinking at bars, and no crowds of 'drunks' collecting in the jail cells. The abolition of treating has reduced drunkenness to the minimum.

"That was the purpose of the law. If absolutely prohibition had been wanted, such a law would have been passed. The greatest menace of liquor to the public has been removed, and the general moral tone of the province has been uplifted."

CAPRI, A TWIN HUMPED CAMEL

Island Richly Dowered For Artist, Historian and Geologist.

Capri, a great twin humped camel of an island, kneels in the blue just off the Sorrentine peninsula. From the sway backed huddle of white, pink, blue, cream and drab houses along the large harbor up the breakneck road to the fascinating town nestling among the hills, white roofed and Moorish, and on, still higher, by the winding road or up the nearly perpendicular flights of rock stairs which furrow the frowning crag with their sharp, zigzag outlines to Anacapri, 500 feet or so above, every step of the way breathes the pride and splendor and degradation of the island's greater days.

Here a cyclopean mass of shattered masonry in the warm emerald water tells of a Roman emperor's bath, yonder on a chimney-like cliff the sinister ruins of a stout castle keep whispers of ancient garrisons and pirates not armed with automatic rifles or high powered artillery, and here, overlooking the sea, the vast ruins of a villa recall "that hairy old goat" Tiberius and his vastral voluptuousness that turned fair Capri into satyrdom.

Capri today is richly dowered for sightseer, artist, historian, antiquary and geologist. On every hand are shaded walks and sequestered bowers in the thick groves of orange and lemon, laurel and myrtle, wild backgrounds of tumbled rock, titanic rifts in the coast into which the sea has thrust long, insidious blue fingers.—National Geographic Magazine.

gion may be there is no more reason why populations should not exist, and thrive, and prosper within it than that populations should not exist in Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Holland, Finland, and Northern Russia.

A touch of civilization goes a long way toward "warming up" a new country, toward driving from it the atmosphere of the wilderness. The law of probabilities would render it entirely reasonable to assume that the land in Northern Canada, now hidden from the eye of man, contains everything necessary to the maintenance of those who shall delve in it.

When the war is over, the railway that was to be built, at a cost of $16,000,000, in order that Western Canada's great cereal surplus might be carried to Liverpool at a saving of 1000 miles, will be completed. Of this there appears to be no doubt, and with communication once established, thorough exploration will follow as a matter of course. Until it is found that, in the vast territory for which Hudson Bay offers an ocean outlet, there is no fertile soil and no mineral wealth, or, in other words, until it is found that Canada North is less favored naturally than any other part of the globe, it would be well enough to reserve judgment. The prospects are that the zone of activity on the North American Continent will move upward a degree or two in the next few years.

Fire Protection Protects.

Canada lost through forest fires in 1916 over nine million dollars, according to information supplied by Robson Black, secretary of the Canadian Forestry Association. This equals more than six times what has been spent on forest protection work from coast to coast. In areas where first-rate fire protection systems are in operation losses of life and property have been held down to a remarkable minimum. Within the 24,000 square miles of Quebec covered by the two well-organized associations of limit holders the amount of green timber burnt was practically negligible.

cabbage plant requires of moisture, and yet if bage soil is too wet the plant is injured. Cabbage does fairly well on new land, and growers claim that the grows without an abundant manure in the soil better than other vegetables. It is a good practice for backyarders to purchase plants which have been grown in hot-beds or in permanent bed. This saves considerable trouble. It is necessary to set cabbage plants in fairly deep so that they will be whipped about by the wind may be set eighteen inch and there should be quite a depth of soil around the roots. They are ready to be set out and be made with a dibber or a ed stick. The roots may be after they have been set. One of the most important features of cabbage consists in the given to cultivation of the plant may be some occasions when will split, this may be prevented if the heads are the hands and turned force one side to another.

CAULIFLOWER. The cauliflower is treated in much the same manner as the cabbage, the plants being set out in the same manner. They are treated practically as cabbage until it is noticed that the little white flower has come grow. The dry leaves of should be brought together top and tied with a piece of string that these little white flowers be protected from the rays of the sun. All cauliflowers should be treated in this manner when they are about two inches in diameter.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS. Brussels sprouts are perhaps the most important of the cabbage family. If possible to secure brussels sprouts a few seeds may be sown about May 15 at a depth of one inch. These should be transplanted to the permanent bed about June 1. They should be set in the rows and two inches between the rows. It is well to keep the patch clean, and the soil should be stirred frequently unnecessary to trim off the plants grow in the garden.

SWISS CHARD. Swiss chard is grown easily from seed twelve inches apart, the young plants being thinned to six or eight inches apart. The advantage of this is that the leaves may be picked close to the root and need not be shoot up, which may be during the season. The leaves are used for greens and the stalks as asparagus. A few seeds should be sufficient for a family.

growing many vegetables late use the backyard could produce some vegetables can be stored for during winter months. course, do not need to be early as the plants which were last week. Possibly could elapse from the time is planted before these sown.

CARROTS, PARSNIPS, SALSIFY.

These include the most important members of the root family.

They are usually grown for various purposes, though beets are relished by many in all stages of growth. All and practically the same.

The seeds should be sown in rows at a depth of about half an inch. When they have reached a height of two inches they should be carefully thinned so that they stand, beets in three to four inches apart, carrots and salsify two or three inches apart. It will be found that parsnips are very slow growers for this reason it is some- what difficult to plant a few seeds with the parsnip seeds so that they will serve as a marker. The plants may be used as green manure. It is necessary that they be cultivated at intervals of four to six weeks so that they may grow. They do not as a rule require as heavy watering as some of the other vegetables. In the fall the beets should be cut off and the tops twisted off the head, not cut off with a knife as in the case of carrots, parsnips, which should have been cut off about one-half inch from the head preparatory to storing for winter.

In planting corn holes should be made three or four inches deep made with a hoe. Five or six seeds of corn should be dropped in and covered with soil, and be gently firmed by the foot. When the shoots are three inches high all except the three sturdiest should be pulled. The soil should be mounded around the stalks as they give them support. When the corn on the cob appear full of grain they are ready to use. It is best practice to cultivate the corn around the corn, for experts claim that the crops will grow faster and better if the soil is given. Cabbage is one of the most easily grown vegetables. The plant requires a supply of water, and yet if the soil is too wet the plant will

FRENCH MUSICIANS KILLED.

Roll of Honor Contains Names of Many Talented Men.

Many first-prize men of the Paris Conservatoire have been among those slain in the Great War or dead from wounds or sickness, according to "Les Artistes Morts pour la Patrie," a little volume of touching significance by Paul Ginisty, recently published in Paris. The preface to the list of fallen artists is written by the eminent Charles M. Widor, who insists that France's sons of to-day are worthy of their great ancestors. The New Music Review has singled out those parts of the record of special interest to the music world.

The deaths of Alberic Magnard, the composer, one of the first to die; Marcel Casadesus, the 'cellist of the Capet Quartet and Society of Ancient Instruments of Paris, and Jules Ecorcheville, a widely known critic and music historian, who founded the International Society of Music, have long since been told, but interesting new data concerning the circumstances in each case are here provided.

Casadesus told his brother the day of mobilization that he knew he should not return. He was killed by a shell the day he first went under fire. Ecorcheville's age ranged him with the reserves, but he went into active service as an infantry lieutenant. He had been twice named for bravery before he fell at the head of his company, shouting: "Forward! Do your duty!"

Various versions of the manner in which Alberic Magnard met his death have been published, but M. Ginisty's book adds details not known before to the outside world. The son of a famous journalist, Magnard lived quietly in the village of Baron. In September, 1914, the Germans marched for two days through the village. A notary, Robert, was taken as a hostage. At the end of two days a group of the invaders set out to pillage Magnard's house. They found the door closed, but a shutter was open. An arm passed through the opening. There were four shots of a revolver. A Prussian was killed; another was wounded. The rest ran away in search of incendiary material. They returned and set fire to the house. Magnard was in his room on the first floor. When he saw the flames beginning to creep to the ground floor he shot himself with the last ball of his revolver, not to be burned alive. Suspecting the end, he had sent away his household in time.

The Conservatoire's honor list continues: "Maillieux and Mayer, composers, the former a brilliant pianist, were killed on the field of battle. Gabriel Moge, violinist, who had toured with success, was told by one of his teachers, 'You were not made for war.' A ball went into his intestines and he died in a hospital next day. Philippe Moreau, assistant conductor of the Colonne concerts, composer, essayist, son of the dramatist, was numbered among the missing in August, 1914. His friend and teacher, Xavier Leroux, does not wholly despair of him.

"Phal, a brilliant violinist, went as a soldier and was promoted to a lieutenant. Killed before a trench while he was observing the German line, he was so mourned by his men that they covered with oak leaves the litter that bore his body to the rear. It was all they could do in reverence."

Art in Canada.

Although the Parliamentarians have taken possession of the Royal Victoria Museum and have dispossessed Canada's National Art Gallery, good use in the meantime is being made of the pictures which form part of the display. Loan exhibitions are held or will be held soon in Halifax, Sherbrooke, Hamilton, Winnipeg, and Moose Jaw. This is in line with the policy of the directors to inaugurate a system of loan exhibitions to reputable art societies. Bodies in Canada having proper facilities for their exhibition could borrow from twenty to thirty pictures a year with the option of renewal or exchange at the end of a year.

Writing on the work of the Gallery, Mr. Eric Brown, director, says: "It may perhaps not be yet generally known that the National Gallery presents an annual travelling scholarship of one thousand dollars ($1,000), awarded by the council of the Royal Canadian Academy at their annual exhibition, to the most promising young artist of the year. The scholarship was awarded in November last for the third year in succession, although owing to the war the successful artists have not made use of it, as its conditions necessitate residence in certain art centres of Europe which are closed owing to the war.

"There is developing in Canada a school of decorative landscape painting entirely original and indigenous and quite unparalleled on this continent. With proper appreciation and encouragement it should become one of our most valuable national assets, for there is no surer sign of the spiritual growth of nations than the condition of their art."

Would Bonus Doctor.

The 700 residents of Pelee Island, thirty miles south of the mainland at Point Pelee in Canadian Lake Erie, will shortly petition the Ontario Government for permission to create by special taxation a bonus for a physician who will agree to live in their midst from year to year.

Seed Grain Is Assured.

The Government have in the West a quantity of seed grain which is estimated to be sufficient for all need.

Line and Staff Officers.

Broadly speaking, the distinction between a line officer and a staff officer is that between the fighter and the nonfighter. The staff officer has non-military duties. He may, for example, be a member of the medical corps, an instructor at a military institute or have charge of some administrative department of the army or navy. The word is also used for those men attached to the staff of the commander in chief. A line officer is literally that; he is the man in the field or on a battleship to do the actual fighting.—New York Sun.

Cabbage does particularly well on new land, and some claim that the cabbage without an abundant supply of water in the soil better than many vegetables. It is considered a practice for backyard gardeners to purchase plants which have been grown in hot-beds or hot-houses and transplant them directly into the permanent bed. This saves considerable trouble. It is necessary when cabbage plants to set them deep so that they will not be blown about by the wind. They should be set eighteen inches apart, and should be quite a good deal around the roots. When they are to be set out a hole may be made with a dibber or a sharpener. The roots may be watered before they have been set. One of the important features of growing cabbage consists in the attention to the cultivation of the soil. There are some occasions when the head is lit, this may be stopped or prevented if the head is taken in hand and turned forcibly from one position to another.

Cauliflower. The cauliflower is much the same way as the plants being grown and in the same manner outside. It is treated practically the same way until it is noticed that a white flower has commenced to grow. The dry leaves of the plant are brought together at the top and tied with a piece of string so that the little white flowers are protected from the rays of the sun and rain. All cauliflower heads should be treated in this manner when they are about two inches in diameter.

Brussels Sprouts. Brussels sprouts are perhaps the most hardy of the cabbage family. If it is intended to secure brussels sprouts a few seeds may be planted in rows about 15 at a depth of about one inch. These should be transplanted to a permanent bed about the 15th of May. They should be set eighteen inches in the row and two feet between the rows. It is well to keep the soil clean, and the surface soil should be stirred frequently. It is necessary to trim off the leaves as they grow in the garden.

Swiss Chard. Swiss chard can be grown easily from seed, in rows about 15 inches apart, the young plants should be thinned to six or eight inches. The advantage of this plant is that the leaves may be pulled off as needed, and the root and new leaves will continue to grow throughout the season. The roots are eaten as greens and the stem of the chard as asparagus. A few plants are sufficient for a small family.

England and Japan in China.

Despite all the unkind things that have been said about the Japanese, one must concede that their commercial success in China has been due largely to their perseverance, industry, agility, and frugality. You cannot succeed in business in the Orient by spending four hours a day in a luxurious office, devoting the rest of the time to golfing and dinners and social gatherings, while your Asiatic rivals work fifteen hours or more every day and are satisfied with offices or shops which offer no personal comfort. And this is merely one of the many factors that enter into the reckoning.—K. K. Kawakami, in the February Atlantic.

"General, I saw with my own eyes an unconscious British officer being carried away from Koch's house in Ramleh in an automobile—two men with him." Capper fixed the governor with a lean index finger dramatically. "And I saw the man you just this morning received as Captain Woodhouse leave Dr. Koch's house five minutes after that poor devil—the real Woodhouse—had been carried off. That's the reason I took the same boat with him to Gibraltar. General Crandall—because I'm loyal and it was my duty to warn you."

"Incredible!"

"One thing more, general." Capper was sorely tempted, but for the minute his wholesome fear of consequences curbed his tongue. "Woodhouse isn't working alone on the Rock; you can be sure of that. He's got friends to help him turn whatever trick he's after—maybe in this very house. They're clever people, you can mark that down on your slate!"

"Ridiculous!" The keeper of the Rock was fighting not to believe now. "Why, I tell you if they had a hundred of their spies inside the lines—if they knew the Rock as well as I do—they could never take it."

Capper rose wearily, the air of a misunderstood man on him.

"Perhaps they aren't trying to capture it. I know nothing about that. Well, I've done my duty as one Englishman to another. I hope I've told you in time. I'll be going now."

General Crandall swung on him sharply. "Where are you going?" he demanded.

Capper shrugged his shoulders hopelessly. Now was the minute he'd been counting on—the peeling of crackling notes from a fat bundle, the handsome words of appreciation. Surely General Crandall was ripe.

"Well, general, frankly—I'm broke. Haven't a shilling to bless myself with. I thought perhaps— Capper shot a keen glance at the older man's face, which was partly turned from him. The general appeared to be pondering. He drank abruptly on the spy. "A few drinks and you might talk," he challenged.

Capper grinned deprecatingly. "I don't know, general—I might," he murmured. "I've been away from the drink so long that—"

"Poor Cynthia! My heart goes out to her."

"Oh, it needn't!" Lady Crandall answered, with a tilting of her strictly Iowa style nose. "The Maxwell person has made me bleed more than once here on the Rock with the gowns a fond mamma sends her from Paris. But, honestly, isn't this a bit low for a staid, middle aged person like myself? I'm afraid I'll have trouble getting past the censor." Lady Crandall plumed herself with secret joy.

Jane looked up, puzzled.

"Oh, that's old Lady Porter—a perfect dragon," the general's wife rattled on. "Poor old dear, she thinks the Lord put her on the Rock for a purpose. Her own collars get higher and higher. I believe if she ever was presented at court she'd emulate the old Scotch lady who followed the law of decollete, but preserved her self respect by wearing a red flannel chest protector. You must meet her."

"I'm afraid I won't have time to get a look at your dragon," Jane returned, with a little laugh, all happiness. "Now that Sir George has promised me I can sail on the Saxonia Friday!"

"You really must!" The envious eyes of Lady Crandall fell on the pile of plans—potent Delphic mysteries to charm the heart of woman—that lay scattered about upon the floor.

Jane sat back on her heels and surveyed the melting folds of satin with an artist's eye.

"If you only knew what it means to me to get back with my baskets full of French beauties! Why, when I screwed up my courage two months ago to go to old Hildebrand and ask him to send me abroad as a buyer—I'd been studying drawing and French at nights for three years in preparation, you see—he roared like the dear old lion he is and said I was too young. But I cooed and pleaded, and at last he said I could come on trial, and so!"

"He'll pur like a pussycat when you get back," Lady Crandall put in, with a pat on the brown head at her knees.

"Maybe. If I can slip into New York with my little baskets while all the other buyers are still over here, cabling tearfully for money to get home or asking their firms to send a warship to fetch them—why, I guess the pennant's mine all right."

The eternal feminine, so strong in him apart from the common run of men. She evaded Lady Crandall's probing with a shrug of the shoulders. "It's a secret which I myself do not know, Lady Crandall, and never will." Back to the e'erweening lure of the gown the flitting fancy of the general's lady betook itself.

"You—don't think this is a shade too young for me, Miss Gerson?" Anxiety pleaded to be quashed.

"Nonsense!" Jane laughed.

"But I'm no chicken, my dear. If you would look me up in our family Bible back in Davenport you'd find"—

Her maid knocked and entered on the lady's crisp "Come!"

"The general wishes to see you, Lady Crandall, in the library."

"Tell the general I'm in the midst of trying on"—Lady Crandall began, then thought better of her excuse. She dropped the shimmering gown from her shoulders and slipped into a kimono.

"Some stuffy plan for entertaining somebody or other, my dear"—this to Jane. "The real burden of being governor general of the Rock falls on the general's wife. Just slip into your bonnet, and when I'm back we'll take that little stroll through the Alameda I've promised you for this morning."

She clutched her kimono about her and whisked out of the room.

General Crandall, just rid of the dubious pleasure of Billy Capper's company, was pacing the floor of the library office thoughtfully. He looked up with a smile at his wife's entrance.

"Helen, I want you to do something for me," he said.

"Certainly, dear!" Lady Crandall was not an unpleasing picture of ripe beauty to look on in the soft drape of her Japanese robe. Even in his worry General Crandall found himself intrigued for the minute.

"There's a new chap in the signal service—just in from Egypt—name's Woodhouse. I wish you would invite him to tea, my dear."

"Of course, any day."

"This afternoon, if you please, Helen," the general followed.

His wife looked slightly puzzled.

"This afternoon? But, George, dear, isn't that—aren't you—ah—rushing this young man to have him up to Government House so soon after his arrival?" She suddenly remembered something that caused her to reverse herself. "Besides, I've asked him to dinner—the dinner I'm to give the Americans tomorrow night before they sail."

General Crandall looked his surprise.

"You didn't tell me that. I didn't know you had met him."

"Just happened to." Lady Crandall cut in hastily. "Met him at the Hotel Splendide last night when I brought Miss Gerson home with me."

"What was Woodhouse doing at the Splendide?" the general asked suspiciously.

"Why, spending the night, you foolish boy. Just off the Princess Mary, he was. I believe he did Miss Gerson some sort of service—and I met him in that way—quite informally."

"Did Miss Gerson—a service—hum?"

"Oh, a trifling thing! It seemed she had only French money, and that cautious Almer fellow wouldn't accept it. Captain Woodhouse gave her English gold for it—to pay her bill. But why?"

"Has Miss Gerson seen him since?"

"If it could be arranged, yes, general." Capper was spinning the brim of his bowler between nervous fingers. He did not dare meet the other's glance.

"Demmit, Capper, you come here to blackmail me! I've met your kind before! I know how to deal with your ilk!"

"So help me, general, I came here to tell you the truth! I want to go to Paris—or anywhere away from here. I'll admit that. But that had nothing to do with my coming all the way here from Alexandria—spending my last guinea on a steamer ticket—to warn you of your danger. I'm an Englishman and—loyal!" Capper was pleading now. All hope of reward had sped, and the vision of a cell with subsequent investigations into his own record appalled him. General Crandall sat down at his desk and began to write.

"I don't know—at any rate, I can't have you talking around here. You're going to Paris."

Capper dropped his hat. At the tap of the bell Jaimilr Khan appeared at the doors so suddenly that one might have said he was right behind them all the time. General Crandall directed that his orderly be summoned. When the subaltern appeared the general handed him a sealed note.

"Orderly, turn this gentleman over to Sergeant Crosby at once," he commanded, "and give the sergeant this note." Then to Capper: "You will cross to Algeciras, where you will be put on a train for Madrid. You will have a ticket for Paris and 20 shillings for expense en route. You will be allowed to talk to no one alone before you leave Gibraltar, and under no circumstances will you be allowed to return, not while I am governor general at least."

CHAPTER XIII.

Her Country's Example.

"DO you know, my dear, Cynthia Maxwell is simply going to die with envy when she sees me in this!"

The plump little mistress of Government House, standing before a full length mirror in her boudoir, surveyed herself with intense satisfaction. Her arms and neck burst startlingly from the clinging sheath of the incomparable gown that was Jane Gerson's douceur for official protection. In the flood of morning light pouring through the mullioned windows Lady Crandall seemed a pink and white—and somewhat florid—lily in bloom out of time. Hildebrand's buyer, on her knees and with deft fingers busy with the soft folds of the skirt, answered through a mouthful of pins:

"ing their firms to send a warship to fetch them—why, I guess the pennant's mine all right."

The eternal feminine, so strong in Iowa's transplanted stock, prompted a mischievous question:

"Then you won't be leaving somebody behind when you sail—somebody who seemed awfully nice and—foreign and all that? All our American girls find the moonlight over on this side infectious. Witness me—a 'finishing trip' abroad after school days—and see where I've finished—on a Rock!" Lady Crandall bubbled laughter. A shrewd downward sweep of her eye was just in time to catch a flush mounting to Jane's cheeks.

"Well, a mysterious stranger has crossed my path," Jane admitted. "He was very nice, but mysterious."

"Oh!" A delighted gurgle from the older woman. "Tell me all about it—a secret for these ancient walls to hear."

Jane was about to reply when second thought checked her tongue. Before her flashed that strange meeting with Captain Woodhouse the night before—his denial of their former meeting, followed by his curious insistence on her keeping faith with him by not revealing the fact of their acquaintance. She had promised—why she had

"A mysterious stranger has crossed my path."

promised she could no more divine than the reason for his asking, but a promise it was that she would not betray his confidence. More than once since that minute in the reception room of the Hotel Splendide Jane Gerson had reviewed the whole baffling circumstances in her mind, and a growing resentment at this stranger's demand as well as at her own compliance with it was rising in her heart. Still, this Captain Woodhouse was "different," and—this Jane sensed without effort to analyze—the mystery which he threw about himself but served to set tious Almer fellow wouldn't accept it. Captain Woodhouse gave her English gold for it—to pay her bill. But why?"

"Has Miss Gerson seen him since?" General Crandall asked sharply.

"Why, George, dear, how could she? We haven't been up from the breakfast table an hour."

"Woodhouse was here less than an hour ago to pay his duty call and report," he explained. "I thought perhaps he might have met our guest somewhere in the garden as he was coming or going."

"He did send her some lovely roses." Lady Crandall brightened at this, to her, patent inception of a romance. She doted on romances. "They were in Miss Gerson's room before she was down to breakfast."

"Roses, eh? And they met informally at the Splendide only last night." Suspicion was weighing the general's words. "Isn't that a bit sudden? I say, do you think Miss Gerson and this Captain Woodhouse had met somewhere before, last night?"

"I hardly think so—she on her first trip to the continent and he coming from Egypt. But—"

"No matter. I want him here to tea this afternoon." The general dismissed the subject and turned to his desk. His lady's curiosity would not be so lightly turned away.

"All these questions—aren't they rather absurd? Is anything wrong?" She ran up to him and laid her hands on his shoulders.

"Of course not, dear." He kissed her lightly on the brow. "Now run along and play with that new gown Miss Gerson gave you. I imagine that's the most important thing on the Rock today."

Lady Crandall gave her soldier husband a peck on each cheek and skipped back to her room. When he was alone again General Crandall resumed his restless pacing. Resolution suddenly crystallized, and he stepped to the desk telephone. He called a number.

"That you, Bishop? General Crandall speaking. Bishop, you were here on the Rock seven years ago? Good! Pretty good memory for names and faces, eh? Right! I want you to come to Government House for tea at 5 this afternoon. But run over for a little talk with me some time earlier—an hour from now, say. Rather important. You'll be here. Thank you."

CHAPTER XIV.

In Doubt.

GENERAL CRANDALL sat at his desk and tried to bring himself down to the routine crying from accumulated papers there. But the canker Billy Capper had implanted in his mind would not give him peace. General Crandall's tremendous responsibility would not permit him to ignore Capper's warning, coming even from so low a source. Yet the man found himself groping blindly in the dark before the dilemma presented; he had no foot rule of precept or experience to guide him.

His fruitless searching for a prop in emergency was broken by the appearance of Jane Gerson in the door opening from Lady Crandall's rooms to the right of the library. The girl was dressed for the out of doors; in her arms was a fragrant bunch of blood red roses, spraying out from the top of a bronze bowl. The girl hesitated

"I'm not going to think I'm going to know." He lips shut over the last smack of authority.

"General Crandall," she began, "my training in Hildebrand's store hasn't made me much of a diplomat. All this war and intrigue make me dizzy. But I know one thing—this isn't my war

General Crandall shrugged his shoul-

"Maybe your country may not be able to do that," he declared, with a touch of solemnity. "I pray God it may. But I'm afraid your resolution will not hold, Miss Gerson."

"I'm going to try to make it any-

Gibraltar's commander, baffled thus by a neutral—a neutral fair to look on in the bargain—tried another tack. He assumed the fatherly air.

"Lady Crandall and I have tried to show you we were friends—tried to help you get home," he began.

"You've been very good to me," Jane broke in feelingly.

"What I say now is spoken as a friend, not as governor of the Rock.
If it is true that you have met Wood-

here verifies my suspicion—that very fact makes his word worthless and releases you from any promise you may have made not to reveal this and what you may know about him; also it should put you on your guard—his motives in any attentions he may pay you cannot be above suspicion."

"I think that is a personal matter I am perfectly capable of handling," Jane's resentment sent the flags to her cheeks.

General Crandall was quick to back water. "Yes, yes! Don't misunderstand me. What I mean to say is"—

He was interrupted by his wife's voice calling for Jane from the nearby room. Anticipating her interruption, he hurried on:

"For the present, Miss Gerson, we'll drop this matter. I said a few minutes ago I intended shortly to—know. I hope I won't have to carry out that—threat."

Jane was withdrawing one of the buds from the jar. At his last word she dropped it with a little gasp.

"Threat, general?"

"I hope not. Truly, I hope not. But, young woman"—

She stooped, picked up the flower and was setting it in his buttonhole before he could remonstrate.

"This one was for you, general," she said, and the truce was sealed. That minute Lady Crandall was wafted into the room on the breeze of her own staccato interruption.

"What's this—what's this! Flirting back's turned? Brazen miss! I'm here to take you off to the gardens at once, where you can find somebody

She had her arm through Jane's and was marching her off. An exchange of glances between the governor and Hildebrand's young diplomat of the dollar said that what had passed between them was a confidence.

Jaimihr Khan announced Major Bishop to the general a short time later. The major, a rotund, pink faced man of forty, who had the appearance of being ever tubbed, and groomed to the pink of parade perfection, saluted his superior informally, accepted a cigarette and crossed his plump legs in an easy chair near the general's desk. General Crandall folded his arms on his desk and went direct to his subject:

"Major, you were here on the Rock seven years ago, you say?"

"Here ten years, general. Regular Rock scorpion—old timer."

"Do you happen to recall this chap Woodhouse whom I sent to you to report for duty in the signal tower today? Has transfer papers from Wady Halfa?"

"Haven't met him yet, though Captain Carson tells me he reported at my office a little more than an hour ago. See him after parade. Woodhouse—Woodhouse"—The major propped his chin on his fingers in thought.

"His papers—army record and all that—say he was here on the Rock for three months in the spring of 1907." General Crandall urged, to refresh the other's memory.

Major Bishop stroked his round cheeks, tugged at one ear, but found recollection difficult.

"When I see the chap—so many coming and going, you know. Three months—bless me! That's a thin slice out of ten years."

"Major, I'm going to take you into my confidence," the senior officer began; then he related the incident of Capper's visit and repeated the charge he had made. Bishop sat aghast at the word "spy."

"Woodhouse will be here to tea this afternoon," continued Crandall. "While you and I ask him a few leading questions I'll have Jaimhr, my Indian, search his room in barracks. I trust Jaimhr implicitly, and he can do the job smoothly. Now, Bishop, what do you remember about 1907—something we can lead up to in conversation, you know?"

The younger man knuckled his brow for a minute, then looked up brightly.

"I say, general, Craigen was governor then. But—um—aren't you a bit—mild—this asking of a suspected spy to tea?"

"What can I do?" the other replied, somewhat testily. "I can't clap an officer of his majesty's army into prison on the mere say-so of a drunken outcast who has no proof to offer. I must go slowly, major. Watch for a slip on this Woodhouse. One bad move on his part and he starts on his way to face a firing squad."

Bishop had risen and was slowly pacing the room, his eyes on the walls, hung with many portraits in oils.

"Well, you can't help admiring the nerve of the chap," he muttered, half to himself. "Forcing his way on to the Rock—why, he might as well put his head in a cannon's mouth."

"I haven't time to admire," the general said shortly. "Thing to do is to act."

"Quite right. Nineteen-seven, eh? Um"—He paused before the portrait of a young woman in a Gainsborough hat and with a sparkling, piquant face. "By George, general, why not try him on Lady Evelyn? There's a fair test for you, now!"

"Good idea, though," the older man acquiesced. "We'll trip him on Lady Evelyn."

CHAPTER XV.

Enter, a Cigarette.

MR. JOSEPH ALMER, proprietor of the Hotel Splendide on Waterport street, was absorbed, heart and soul, in a curious task. He was emptying the powder from two grain quinine capsules on to a sheet of white letter paper on his desk.

It was noon of Wednesday, the day following the arrival of Captain Woodhouse. Almer was alone in the hotel's reception room and office behind the dingy glass partially inclosing his desk. His alpaca covered shoulders were close to his ears, and his bald head, with its stripes of plastered hair running like thick lines of latitude on a polished globe, was held far forward so as to bring his eyes on the work in hand. Like some plump magpie he appeared, turning over lots of china in a treasure hole.

A round box of the gelatin cocoons lay at his left hand; it had just been delivered by an Arab boy, quick to pick up the street commission for a tuppence. Very methodically Almer picked the capsules from the box one by one, opened them and spilled the quinine in a little heap under his nose. He grunted peevishly when the sixth shell had been emptied. The seventh capsule brought an eager whistle to his lips. When he had jerked the concentric halves apart very little powder fell out. Instead, the thin, folded edges of a pellet of rice paper protruded from one of the containers. This Almer had extracted in an instant. He spread it against the black back of a ledger and read the very fine script written thereon. This was the message:

Danger. An informer from Alexandria has denounced our friend to Crandall. You must warn; I cannot.

The spy's heart was suddenly drained, and the wisp of paper in his hand trembled so that it scattered the quinine about in a thin cloud. Once more he read the note, then held a match to it and scuffed its feathery ash with his feet into the rug beneath his stool. The forthrude which had held Joseph Almer to the Rock in the never failing hope that some day would bring him the opportunity to do a great service for the fatherland came near crumbling that minute. He groaned.

"Our friend," he whispered, "Woodhouse—trapped!"

Almer did not attempt to go behind the note and guess who was the informer that had lodged information with the governor general. He had forgotten, in fact, the incident of the night before, when the blustering Capper called the newly arrived Woodhouse by name. The dash of suspicion that attached responsibility to the American girl named Gerson was dissipated as quickly as it came. She had arrived by motor from Paris, not on the boat from Alexandria. His was now the imperative duty to carry warning to the suspected one, not to waste time in idle speculation as to the identity of the betrayer. There was but one ray of hope in this sudden pall of gloom, and that Almer grasped eagerly. He knew the character of General Crandall—the phlegmatic conservatism meant perfection and the maintenance of a hair trigger state of efficiency.

Mr. Henry J. Sherman stood with his wife, Kitty and Willy Kimball—Kimball had developed a surprising interest in one of these home folks at least—under the shade of the row of plane trees fringing the parade grounds. They tried to persuade themselves that they were seeing something worth while. This pleasing fiction wore thin with Mr. Sherman before fifteen minutes had passed.

Publicity Needed.

In a leading article printed in The Paris Matin by a special representative visiting Ottawa, a comprehensive survey of Canada's efforts is made. Both military and industrial phases of the Dominion's war work are dealt with. In fact, says the correspondent, the Ministers assured him the only article of military equipment not provided by Canada was lorgnettes. On the banks of the St. Lawrence, as on those of the Thames and the Seine, people are gladly giving money, blood and work for the cause of humanity.

Discussing this article a Canadian officer declared that such publicity regarding Canadian doings was greatly needed on the Continent, not only in France, but in the neutral countries. Countries such as Norway and Sweden, although receiving propaganda matter about Great Britain, are ignorant of what Canada is doing.

ROCK OF GIBRALTAR.

The "Key of the Mediterranean" Has Had a Stormy History.

England has been in possession of the rocky promontory of Gibraltar since 1704. From that time to this it has been a crown colony under the administration of a governor. By reason of its important strategical position it is called the "key of the Mediterranean."

Gibraltar has had a stormy history. In 711 the rock was taken by the Arab chief Tarik, who called it Jebel-al-Tarik (Hill of Tarik) and built a fortress on the promontory. Part of these ruins is still extant. In 1309 it was taken by the Castilians, only to be recaptured by the Moors in 1333. It was held by them until 1462. Following the taking and sacking of Gibraltar in 1540 by Barbarossa, extensive military works were built there by order of Charles V.

In 1704 the promontory was captured by a combined force under Sir George Rooke and the Prince of Hesse-Darmstadt, fighting for the Archduke Charles of Austria. The moment it fell into their hands the British admiral threw off the alliance with the Austrians and took complete possession of the works.

British possession since that time has been unbroken, although it was under a Spanish siege for nearly three years and eight months, beginning in 1779. Twice the garrison was on the point of falling because of the starvation of its defenders.

PROFITABLE SOIL CULTURE

CORN PLANTING METHODS.

Fundamentals of Culture, Especially Under Droughty Conditions.

Special planting methods often must be used for corn in regions where either moisture or heat is insufficient. Listing, or planting in furrows, is the most common and best method of planting corn in a large part of the semiarid area. It is not only economical, as it permits large acreages to be handled at the least cost, but it also places the plants to the best advantage to withstand drought. As the furrows are closed by cultivation, the plant roots are placed well below the surface. A deep soil mulch can be maintained without injury to the roots. The plants are more securely braced to withstand winds than when surface planted.

In some semiarid sections early summer conditions are favorable for rapid growth. The plants make a tender, rapid growth and become larger than the later moisture supply will support. Listing retards this rapid early growth and is often a decided advantage on this account.

Where the seasons are very short surface planting is better than listing, as the retarding of early growth leaves the plants insufficient time to reach maturity. Where surface planting is practiced on fairly level land it is usually advisable to plant in checks to permit cross cultivation. Cross cultivation makes weed and grass control easier. It also assists cultivation, drying and warming a larger part of the soil surface.

A thin stand of plants is an essential feature of successful corn growing

IMPORTANT TO SPRAY ORCHARDS IN WINTER

To use a cheap grade of spraying material is poor economy, writes F. A. Lawton in the Orange Judd Farmer. For several years I have used lime sulphur with more or less success. Last year I decided to try the soluble sulphur compound and found it is much better to handle and the results from spraying were improved. Orchards that had not responded readily to former treatment were in much better shape after a winter spraying with soluble sulphur compound.

The winter spray for fungus should be put on before the buds start in the spring. This is the most important spraying of all, for if an orchard is badly infected with fungus no amount of summer spraying will give good fruit, while an orchard given a thorough treatment of winter spray will give a crop of fruit in fair condition without any other treatment. But if you wish to be sure of getting first class apples the winter spray should be followed by another later on when the blossoms begin to fall, and perhaps more spraying later in the season might be desirable.

Plums and peaches need several summer sprays to keep down the rot. Some form of arsenate of lead should be used with the spray at the time the blossoms begin to fall, as this will largely do away with wormy fruit. I have raised several hundred bushels of cherries during the last few years, and by giving them a thorough spraying with lime sulphur and arsenate of lead just as the blossoms fall, have never been troubled with wormy cherries, only on the tops of high trees where the spray did not reach. Cherries should have at least three sprayings, the first when the blossoms fall, the second two weeks later and the third after the fruit is gathered.

To get the right results an orchard should be thoroughly trimmed, all sprouts and dead leaves cut out, and enough branches taken out to give the sunlight and air free access to the center of the tree. For fruit, to be good, must have sunlight and air.

Spray For Cabbage Pest.

I have been making a specialty of onions and cabbages but have been much troubled with green worms, writes a correspondent of the American Agriculturist. I have tried different formulas but have now found one that I have never seen in print. It is doing me more service than any I have tried. Here it is: Take a half pint crude or raw petroleum oil and add a half teaspoonful of potash. Shake these well together. To this add ten gallons of water and a little paris green or arsenate of lead. It will kill the worms and will stick to the leaves until the cabbage grows. I apply this preparation with a compressed air sprayer, throwing it well into the loose heads and over the tender leaves. The preparation mixes smoothly and evenly and will not injure the foliage in any way. It must be thoroughly mixed to

FARMING AND LIVE STOCK

HANDLING GROWING PIGS.

Swine Need a Variety of Feeds, Especially in Cold Weather.

No one can make hogs profitable by feeding only corn and water, especially this year. Some do market hogs raised on that diet, but I have had experience for a lifetime and have tried the corn feeding alone and found it very unprofitable, writes an Indiana farmer in the American Agriculturist. One can fatten a hog on corn alone, but with no profit. By giving a variety of food from the time the pig is old enough to eat until it is marketed you have bone and muscle in proportion to the body weight.

A balanced growing ration which has the required amount of protein must be fed. It has been in the past the general belief among farmers that protein is protein, wherever it is found, and that its source could in no wise affect its value to the growing animal. Corn contains 10 per cent protein, but after all out of the 10 per cent protein that corn contains only 3 per cent is valuable to the growing pig. Therefore I have seen the improvements made by feeding swine material that were higher in protein.

Our routine of feeding growing shotes is to furnish a rye pasture dur-

Admirers of the Duroc-Jersey breed of hogs claim that this type will make greater gains on less feed than other breeds. The Duroc-Jersey is of the hard type, is a quick maturer and ready to market at six months. The sows are prolific and will raise two litters a year. The sow shown is a Duroc-Jersey.

ing winter and use as slop feed one part rye, one part oats and one part corn, ground and thoroughly mixed. With this we use tankage or linseed meal. We also use shorts, middlings and dairy byproducts, which all promote the rapid growth and development of the growing hog. In summer hogs do not require much extra feed where good clover or alfalfa pasture is obtainable.

Charcoal and sufficient salt are both relished and necessary to the fat hog. We feed warm slop consisting of ground mixed feeds, shorts or middlings once daily until the hogs are marketed. I do not think hogs should be fed slop at night, for it has a tendency to make the hog fretful and restless during the night. When they soil surface.

A thin stand of plants is an essential feature of successful corn growing in regions of limited moisture supply. When planting is done with a lister in rows three to three and one-half feet apart the plants should be one in a place and from eighteen to thirty-six inches apart, depending upon the rainfall and the fertility and the water holding capacity of the soil. In surface planted corn with the hills three and one-half feet apart each way the stand should not be thicker than two plants per hill. Even with the best of seed more kernels should be planted than the number of plants desired. Some young plants, mostly the weaker ones, will perish.

The usual distance between corn rows is about three and one-half feet, which is a convenient distance for cultivating. With the rows at this distance the roots meet between the rows and occupy all of the upper soil before the corn comes into tassel.

In certain droughty sections, where the seasons are comparatively long, increasing the width of row to seven feet and doubling the stand in the row has been found to be an advantage. Where the summers are long other crops or another crop of corn can be planted later in the season between the seven foot rows if the seasonal rainfall proves sufficient.

Corn should not be covered with more than one and one-half or two inches of soil except when the surface is dry and it is necessary to plant deeper to reach moist soil. In cold, heavy soils one inch is sufficient.

and will not injure the foliage in any way. It must be thoroughly mixed to be effective.

Prune the Orchard.

Fruit growers do not need to wait until spring to prune their orchards, says W. G. Brierley of the division of horticulture, Minnesota Agricultural college. Results at University farm show little or no difference in the growth and maturity of the wood where pruning has been done any time between November and May.

If the usual care is taken to make the cuts close to the main trunk or branches no stubs will be left to die and decay, though the covering of wounds with a white lead and oil paint or with common grafting wax warmed to the consistency of cold molasses will give added protection. Moderate pruning is better than heavy cutting.

Bees For Farmers.

Have you a little beehive in your yard? If you haven't you are helping to lose the $14,000,000 worth of honey products that are available in Minnesota every year and is not collected because there are not enough bees to store it. Nearly $15,000,000 worth of honey could be produced every year in the state. Only $500,000 worth is collected. The honey could be collected at a minor cost by keeping as many hives of bees in every yard as can be fed from the honey products produced around.—Professor F. Jager, Minnesota Agricultural College.

be red stop at night, for it has a tendency to make the hog fretful and restless during the night. When they leave their warm beds on cold mornings they are heated from fretting, and in the cold air they become chilled and are liable to chronic ailments, which often prove serious. I have tried cooking the slop and find it to be a very profitable method during the winter when fed warm. It makes the food more nutritious, and hogs that are fed this cooked material regularly make rapid gains, both in flesh and growth. I have been more convinced every year I have cared for hogs that a clean feeding pen and dry, warm beds are all necessary to obtain profitable results.

The Day of the Carver.

Carving was once a serious thing. The sixteenth century carver was a professional. He had to make the joint fit the guest. The size of his slices was the thing. Then he had to know his guests and cut accordingly. A lord, for instance, at the table, and a pike was dished up whole. Smaller fry, and the pike came on in slices. The same procedure with pig. The rank of the diners decided whether it should appear at table in gold leaf or naked, whole or sliced. With bread, too, there was a difference. New or three days old baked was at the discretion of the carver as he sized up the visitors. And as for the apportioning of the titbits according to precedence there was no end. The old time carver, in fact, was born and then made.—London Standard.

Five Good Reasons for Buying this Good White Lead

1. It is absolutely pure, ensuring the brilliancy of any paint in which it is used.
2. It has great covering capacity and long life.
3. It is of unequalled, uniform "fineness"—is never crystalline.
4. It works easily under the brush.
5. It need not be scraped or burned off when, after several years, the building requires another paint.

Its high reputation has been gained by nearly 200 years continuous manufacture. Used and recommended by experienced architects, builders, painters, owners.

ABOUT EFFICIENCY

Just What It May Mean In the Home.

SAVING OF HUMAN EFFORT.

An Expert Discusses How Housewives
May Throw Off Cumbersome Ways of Doing Housework and Substitute a System That Helps Carry the Burden.

We have talked so much about efficiency that it might be well to stop a moment and consider what is the meaning of its opposite, inefficiency.
Probably the best and simplest one word definition of efficiency is conservation. Likewise, we may sum up inefficiency in the simple word "waste."

Yes, inefficiency means waste, either in a process of work, the materials with which the work is done or with the worker. The great problem of efficiency, therefore, is to reduce or eliminate the amount of waste in any of these three lines. It is unfortunate if there is a waste in materials.

Waste in individual effort is what we are most concerned about, especially in regard to the effort of the homemaker. If there is waste, for instance, in the food used in the home, or if there is waste in the method which she uses at work, we regret it, but we are most sorry when she herself wastes her own effort so that she herself is deprived of necessary energy.

In fact, all our efforts are finally aimed to benefit the human worker. If we tell a woman to raise her sink or if we show her how to market economically we are doing so only that her personal effort shall be diminished. Some women write that they feel that this efficiency idea would be an added burden on top of their present work;
that it would be harder to impose new schedules and new plans than to go on with what they are now doing.

Efficiency does not in any way mean added effort. It means simply elimination or cutting down of present faults.
For instance, the other day a woman announced, "If this efficiency idea of yours means a lot of expensive utensils I'm not going to have anything to do with it." Or another writes, "You don't mean that I should add a complicated system of work to my present duties." On the contrary, it is meant that both these women and others should merely sit down and study how at present there may be waste in their management. They do not need to add a cumbersome system or a dozen pots in order to be efficient. They need only see how they work now, see what amount of materials they use now, notice what waste motion or effort there is at present in various tasks or routines and then merely eliminate some of this unnecessary work, this waste motion and this superfluous effort.

If a woman once gets firmly fixed in her mind that efficiency means the elimination of waste she has the key to this whole new, stimulating idea. It may be a waste in her food supplies, in

er find it possible to understand why their daughters have views or feelings that differ from their own, says the Woman's Home Companion. And, likewise, we find daughters who adopt the maternal attitude to their mothers and exercise a censorship over their clothes, occupations and recreations in a fashion truly exasperating. It makes the onlooker want to shout violently
at these types, "Let each other alone."
Even though these attentions are actuated by the fondest love they are an infringement on individual rights.
Mother should let daughter play tennis,
and daughter should not try to select mother's hats. The result would be a great gain in family peace.

There ought to be a special chapter on "Being Impersonal" in every book of etiquette, and, since books of etiquette are usually consulted only by those who may want to know how many cards to leave on twin sisters or what is the time limit on dinner calls, perhaps this special chapter ought to be included in travel stories—yea, even works of fiction—so that every one who reads may see it. It should consist first of advice on how to be impersonal, with helpful hints, such as:
"If your friend looks tired don't tell her so, but do something definite to help her rest." "Never condescend with any one on being either married or unmarried. Both may be fortunate states."
"Never criticize any piece of clothing worn by any one, not even awning stripes on a fat woman or an elbow sleeve on a skinny one." "Never remark on any family likeness. It's bad enough to have it without being told about it."

Sleepy Time Story Concerning a yard—Pride Is Humbled.

Why, it is nearly dark, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly Ann. I believe I will tell you a story about

THE SMART CHICKEN.

Once on a time there was a nice family of chickens living in a nice chicken yard in a charming town, and the chickens belonged to a dear little girl named Milly.

Milly was very fond of the chickens.
She had given all of them nice names.
I can't remember all the names, but there were Flossie and Fluffie and Tip-ple and Topple and many others.

One of the others was Smokie. He was given that name because he looked so much like the gray smoke that came out of the kitchen chimney.

Smokie was really quite a pretty little chicken, and Milly gave him a great deal of petting. Perhaps that turned his head. He became a very vain little chicken. If Milly came out to the chicken yard and did not notice him
he was much displeased.

So to make sure she would notice
him Smokie, when his little wings would bear him, hopped up on the roof of one of the colony houses. When that didn't attract Milly's attention
Smokie would flutter up on the fence.

"You'd best be careful," Mother Hen said, for Smokie had a reckless way of fluttering down from his perch.

Smokie tossed his little head. He thought he was quite able to take care of himself.

One day Milly came out to the chicken yard with a big pan of yellow looking stuff. She set it down on the ground and called the chicks to her.

Smokie must have been taking a nap
on the fence, for he hadn't noticed her come in.

When she called: "Chick, chick, chick!
Come, chick, chick, chick!" he turned and almost tumbled off the fence.
Then he made a dive and landed right in the midst of the pan of yellow stuff.

It was cornmeal mush, which Milly had brought out nice and warm.

Smokie landed right in the middle of it, and the more he tried to get out the more trouble he had, for it was very sticky.

Milly picked him out with mush in his wings and in his feathers.

"Oh, dear! Now you'll have to have a bath!" cried Milly.

So she took him into the house and washed him in warm water, and Smokie felt so queer and had to sit in the basket by the fire until he was dry.

elimination of waste she has the key
to this whole new, stimulating idea. It may be a waste in her food supplies, in the fuel she is using, a waste of time between various tasks, a waste of effort walking twenty feet unnecessarily, but somehow somewhere there will be waste. Then if she cuts down this waste in whatever department she finds it, in whatever task or routine she is in at the time, she will become efficient.

NEW JAUNTINESS.

Picturesqueness For One Piece
Frocks Is the Last Note.

Put up in navy blue velvet and satin,
this straight lined gown gets its piquancy from the hip drape, which also contains a pocket, and from the close the front.

DON'T BE PERSONAL.

The Crudity and the Cruelty of Being Plain Spoken.

Among the immediate members of our families, our nearest and dearest, there frequently prevails a form of affectionate personal service that is irksome and trying, yet cannot be avoided or rebuked without giving offense. There are mothers who harass independent and sensible daughters with silly little admonitions about wearing rubbers and getting home early; who bemoan continually in public their daughters' predilection for tennis and dislike for fine sewing; who nev-

DELIGHTED WITH IT.

cut with a kilt skirt and double breasted front. Natty white and blue buttons add almost as much trimming as does the white cloth collar all picot-ed around the edge.

A FESTIVE IDEA.

This Fetching Way of Arranging Your Dining Table.

It is a new idea now among observing housewives to have, instead of the round or square luncheon cloth, one long runner for the square or oblong table, with enough large and small doilies matching it to fill in along the sides. Of course both ends of the table are covered by the runner, an excellent idea when part of the meal is served from the table instead of from the "side."

While this arrangement is especially appropriate for the oblong table, it can be used for the square, oval or round table with some modification. In the square table the symmetry is often better preserved by two runners crossing in the middle. In the oval or round table the ugly line where the runner falls over the rounded edge is done away with by cutting the runner, rounding the edge to fit the table and setting on the end to fit with a fine seam or a bit of beading. This arrangement means that the runner could be used only for the one size of table,
but it is worth the trouble.

Square hemstitched doilies with a simple corner motif are used with the plain hemstitched runner. It is a good plan to make plate doilies and napkins of the same size and decoration, so that if one gives out the other may come to the rescue. A large doily for the plate will do away with an extra tumbler or teacup doily.

DIED VERY SUDDENLY.

Samuel Hayes, an aged and well-known resident of Mill street passed away very suddenly on Monday at the Wm. Davies factory. Deceased started work at the factory on Monday morning and had an attack of heart failure about five o'clock in the afternoon expiring almost at once. The funeral took place from his late residence on Thursday afternoon. Services were held at St. Mary Magdalene church, after which the remains were laid to rest in Riverside cemetery. The members of Loyal Orange Lodge No. 358, of which deceased was a member, attended the funeral. A widow and one daughter survive.

THE LATE MRS. BURROWS.

Nellie May Rikley, wife of Dr. Burrows, Marlbank, passed away in the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, on Thursday morning of last week, at about 10.30 o'clock, after a three months' illness. The deceased was taken to the hospital some time ago, but apparently on the road to recovery was later taken back to her home. A relapse followed, however, and she was again taken there on Tuesday. The deceased was born near Centreville, in Camden township, forty-four years ago, but resided at Marlbank for the past twenty-two years. She was an Anglican in religion. Besides her husband, three sons, Frederick, in Kingston; Andrew and Ironeus, at Albert College, Belleville, survive. The remains were taken to Marlbank, and the funeral was held on Sunday to Napanee.

DR. WILSON IN GRACE CHURCH LEAGUE.

Last Monday night the young people of Grace church had a very delightful meeting over which Mr. Geo. Gibbard presided. There was good music provided by the orchestra, and Misses Green and Oliver, and Messrs. Black and Evans, and a touching patriotic recitation by Miss Mary Wilson. But the principal interest centred around the address of the evening given by Dr. Charles A. Wilson on his experiences as a medical officer with the 93rd Batt. overseas. Dr. Wilson described very vividly the interesting features of their trip down the St. Lawrence, overland to Halifax, the embarkation, and passage overseas to England under the convoy of the Battle Cruiser Drake. His description of the iceberg, of gun practice at sea, the entrance to the danger zone, and narrow escape from submarines, their landing in Liverpool, and camp life at Otterpool, experiences with Zeppelins, and other features, made a most thrilling and delightful address. The thanks of the young people are due Mr. Wilson for his evening's entertainment.

THE BEST YET.

The Historical Society is maintaining well the standard of addresses that have from time to time been delivered under its auspices during the past few years, and the concluding lecture of the present series promises to be one of the best ever given in Napanee. "Ancient Babylon" is a subject which ought to be of great interest to everyone, and in the hands of Rev. Mr. Boyle it is sure to be presented in an attractive manner. The lantern slides secured especially for the occasion are made from actual photographs taken among the ruins of this ancient city. To most of us Babylon has heretofore been simply a name signifying little. We now have an opportunity to make it a reality, full of meaning. This is the last lecture of the season. Bear in mind the date, Friday, May 11th, in the Historical Hall. All are welcome.

The customs' revenue for April at the Port of Napanee was $46,000.

1st.—Because it has proved itself
 and vindicated unfair criticism 2nd.—Because it has pep and getaway found in no other car.
 3rd.—Because it is comfortable to ride in, easy to drive and has abundance of power.

4th.—Because its Equipment is complete—Electric Starter, Electric Light with Dimmers, Ammeter, Oil Indicator, Speedometer, Tire
 Repair Outfit and Tools.

Lastly 5th.—Because invariably every owner becomes a booster and automatically an advertising medium.

Remember, the new series Chevrolet has many new improvements which will further strengthen its already splendid reputation.
